1. REGULAR TEST

This test type shall be applicable for samples which are submitted for regular test. This regular test shall also conform to the required test frequencies as stipulated in the contract specification for the project.

2. RECHECK TEST

This test type shall be applicable for previously submitted and reserved part of samples. The reserved part of sample was kept by DCL-EMS for a specific period of time, two weeks from the date of the last reported test.

3. RETEST

This test type shall be applicable for newly submitted samples which are requested for repeated test. The new sample submitted shall come from the same lot of the previous sample and the lot had not been processed or altered by any means prior to re-sampling.

4. ADDITIONAL TEST

This test type shall be applicable for newly submitted samples which are requested for repeated test and falls within one of the following criteria:

- 4.1 The test is not included in the contract document.
- 4.2 The test is beyond the frequency requirement of the contract document.
- 4.3 It is a repeated test on a previously tested sample but the lot was processed or altered or the sample is taken from a different lot.
